KUALA LUMPUR, May 27 (Bernama) -- An investigation should be launched into why the Wall Street Journal is taking sides in Malaysia's politics and internal affairs, said the prime minister's Press Secretary Datuk Seri Tengku Sariffuddin Tengku Ahmad.

Alluding to what he described as WSJ's latest false report today, he said the WSJ alleged that Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak was not interviewed by Malaysian investigators, claiming this showed that the investigations which cleared the prime minister of any wrongdoing were "undermined by political pressure and a lack of transparency".

However, Tengku Sariffuddin noted that it was a matter of public record, and was widely reported by other media at the time, that Najib was interviewed for multiple hours on Dec 5, 2015 by the primary investigative body in this case, the Malaysian Anti-Corruption Commission.
