Former PPBM Wanita chief has lodged a police report against the party's Langkawi division secretary for making the allegation.

PETALING JAYA: PPBM's Anina Saadudin today dismissed an allegation by a fellow party member that she had received RM7 million from Najib Razak to rejoin Umno, adding that it was malicious.

Anina, who also sits on the newly-formed party's supreme council, said the allegation was an attempt to tarnish her credibility as a politician.

The former PPBM women's chief said she would not stand for such things and had lodged a police report against the party's Langkawi division secretary Puteri Fataharyati Harun, who had initially made the claim.

"I'm not going to play victim to such slander. It's time I spoke up," she told FMT.

Fataharyati had on May 31, in a Facebook post, called Anina desperate for taking Najib, who is also the Umno president, to court and alleged that she had received RM7 million to jump ship.

Anina, who was a former Langkawi Wanita Umno member, last year filed a suit against Najib over the controversial RM2.6 billion donation he had received.

Attorney-General Mohamed Apandi Ali in 2016 cleared Najib of any offences pertaining to the RM2.6 billion donation, which he said was from the Saudi royal family.

Anina, who was among PPBM's founders, also urged Fataharyati to lodge a complaint with the party's disciplinary board and the Malaysian Anti-Corruption Commission instead of making wild allegations.

PPBM, she added, should not condone such behaviour.

"I am sad and disappointed that no action was taken against her."

She also denied speculation that Fataharyati's actions were fuelled by revenge, adding that they had never had any problems before.
