KUALA LUMPUR, April 11 (Bernama) -- British Prime Minister David Cameron will make a two-day official visit to Malaysia starting tomorrow at the invitation of his counterpart, Datuk Seri Najib Tun Razak.

Cameron's visit, which takes place nine months after the official visit by Najib to the United Kingdom last year, is expected to increase the momentum in bilateral relations between Malaysia and Britain, said the Foreign Ministry in a statement.

"The visit is expected to attract more British investments into the country and promote Malaysia as a preferred investment destination in the region," said the state.

This will be Cameron's first official visit to Malaysia since becoming prime minister in May 2010.

The last visit by a British prime minister to Malaysia was 19 years ago by Sir John Major.

Cameron, who will be accorded an official welcoming ceremony, is scheduled to address a United Kingdom-Britain trade and investment forum.
