Message from the Prime Minister

It is indeed a pleasure to be able to pen my thoughts on the occasion to commemorate the Maritime Institute of Malaysia's 25th anniversary.

In celebrating MIMA's silver anniversary, it is time for us to reflect on our maritime history that played a very dominant role in the evolution of our country into its current role as a maritime nation.

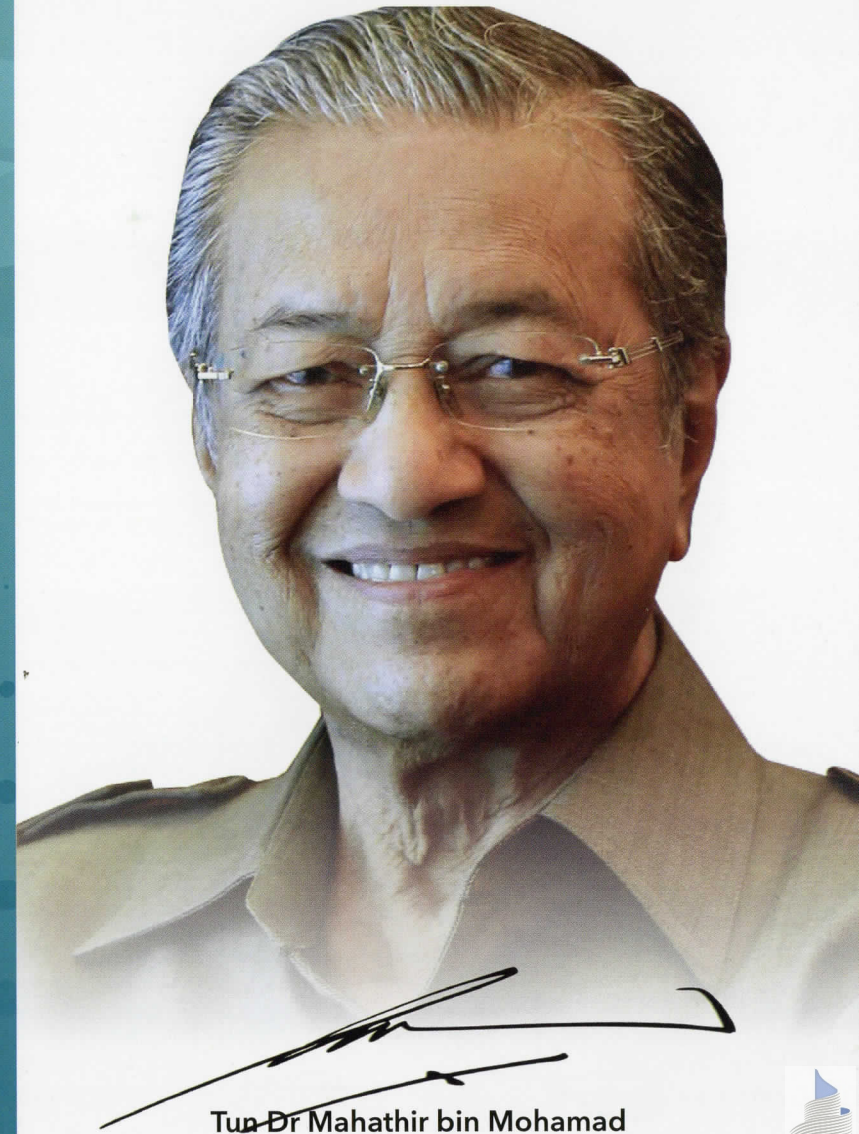

Malaysia's rich maritime history goes back a long way and the seas play a major part in the shaping of the life of this nation and its peoples. In this regard the government has formulated and implemented various policies and infrastructure projects that have made Malaysia a major maritime domain. Among the institutions that have contributed much to the strength of the maritime sector is the Maritime Institute of Malaysia.

It is institutions like MIMA that provide the research and direction that enable the nation's maritime sector to continue its vital role in the economic, social, and community life of the nation.

I am pleased that MIMA has performed well as a maritime policy-research institution and has been intricately involved in major initiatives related to the maritime world. Looking forward, I am sure there are many other such areas relating to the maritime sector that will need our attention and I am confident that MIMA will be able to provide the backing and initiatives in meeting the various challenges produced by a dynamic and ever-changing maritime sector. Our ports, shipping facilities, maritime training institutions and, most importantly, our manpower resources must constantly improve and be upgraded to ensure that Malaysia continues to leverage on its maritime traditions and advantageous geographical position serving the shipping needs of the world.

I am sure MIMA's coming years will be equally challenging and it will be able to step up to face these issues to the benefit of the nation.

Again, I would like to congratulate MIMA for this memorable milestone.
Thank you.

Tun Dr Mahathir bin Mohamad
