Claiming Citizenship

Claiming Citizenship is an authoritative and vital series published by Zed Books in partnership with the Citizenship Development Research Centre (CDRC).

Each high-quality volume features thoroughly peer-reviewed research from senior experts in their field, which examines the multifaceted issues of citizenship, rights, participation and accountability. The books are global in scope and packed with empirical and original case studies, largely from Southern contexts, bringing voices and materials to debates that have often been dominated by the North. While essential reading for development studies students and researchers, the series will be of interest to a broad range of scholars, activists and practitioners concerned with issues of citizenship.

About the editors

John Gaventa is a research professor and fellow in the Participation, Power and Social Change Team at the Institute of Development Studies, University of Sussex. A political sociologist by training, he has written widely on issues of power, citizen action, participation and democracy, including the award-winning Power and Powerlessness in an Appalachian Valley (1980) and Global Citizen Action (co-editor, 2001). He also has been active with a number of NGOs and civil society organizations internationally, including the Highlander Center in the United States and Oxfam in the UK. He is the director of the Development Research Centre on Citizenship, Participation and Accountability and served as co-convenor of the working group on globalizing citizen engagements.

Rajesh Tandon is the founder and executive director of PRIA (Society for Participatory Research in Asia), and has been an activist-scholar for the past three decades, focusing on issues such as citizenship and participatory governance, participatory research and building civil society alliances. In addition to his writing and scholarship, he has served as a civil society leader in India and internationally, including serving as a founding member and chair of CIVICUS, programme director of the Citizens and Governance Programme of the Commonwealth Foundation and chair of the Montreal International Forum (FIM). He has been an active participant in the Development Research Centre on Citizenship, Participation and Accountability and served as co-convenor of the working group on globalizing citizen engagements.
