Acknowledgments

Throughout the research for, and writing of this book, we have received much help and encouragement from many individuals and institutions. It is impossible to acknowledge all of them, and many must unfortunately remain anonymous for their own protection. However, some from among this collection of supportive colleagues, encouraging friends and cooperative research subjects not only can, but must be acknowledged. Each in his or her own way has helped us – either individually or as an authorial team – to think in new ways about the issues at hand, provided access to primary sources, or in some other way helped to improve the manuscript. They include: Ambassador Tommy Arwitz, Swedish Ministry of Foreign Affairs; Talal Atrissi, Lebanese University; Saqr Abu Fakhr, Institute of Palestine Studies, Beirut; David Brannan, Naval Postgraduate School, Center for Homeland Defense and Security; Linda Butler, Institute of Palestine Studies, Washington, DC; Ali Fayyad and his staff at the Consultative Center for Studies and Documentation, Beirut; Philip F. Esler, University of St Andrews; Tahsin Halabi, Palestinian Writers' Union, Syria; Raymond A. Hinnebusch, University of St Andrews; Bruce Hoffman, Georgetown University; Clive Jones, Leeds University; Haytham Muzahem; Nadim Shehadi, Chatham House; and Abdolkarim Soroush.

Anders would like to acknowledge the Naval Postgraduate School, Center for Homeland Defense and Security – and especially its Executive and Academic Directors, Ted Lewis and Chris Bellavita – for providing an uncommonly dynamic and exceptionally stimulating intellectual environment. He would like to dedicate his contribution to this volume to his wife Samantha, for her support, advice, and patience.

Mats would like to thank the Politics of Development Group at Stockholm University (PODSU) for support in terms of seminars, comments, comradeship and grants that made fieldwork possible. He would like to dedicate his contribution to this volume to Kumba, for her commitment, kindness, and support.

Monterey and Stockholm, June 2011

A Note on Transliteration

Throughout the narrative, we have followed commonly used, simplified forms for transliterating the original Arabic, rather than any of the standard systems. We have done so for reasons of readability.
